REPORT OF THE COUNCIL

OF

The Pipe Roll Society.

Read at the General Meeting on the 21*st June*, 1886.

ON the completion of the third working year, the Council have much pleasure in informing the Members that the progress of the Society continues altogether favourable. Notwithstanding that the number of original Members has suffered a slight diminution by reason of deaths, this regrettable loss in no wise affects the general position of the undertaking. In fact, the interest taken by the public in the Society's work is decidedly increasing.

Although, at the last General Meeting of the Society, it was confidently anticipated that by the end of the third financial year the Society's publications would be brought up to date, it has been found that the amount of time required for the careful production of the volumes cannot be gauged with absolute accuracy, owing to the numerous difficulties attending the adoption of record-type. But, as the arrear of work at the date of this Meeting is represented by a single volume, the Council have no hesitation in assuring Members that by the end of May, 1887, the publications due will all be issued.

The Society's publications for its first year, 1883–4, consist of three volumes :—

I. The Pipe Roll of the Fifth year of King Henry II., A.D. 1158–59 (9 rotulets).
II. The Pipe Roll of the Sixth year of King Henry II., A.D. 1159–60 (7 rotulets).
III. Introduction to the Study of the Pipe Rolls.

For the second year, 1884–85, they consist of two volumes :—

IV. The Pipe Roll of the Seventh year of King Henry II., A.D. 1160–61 (9 rotulets).
V. The Pipe Roll of the Eighth year of King Henry II., A.D. 1161–62 (7 rotulets).

For the year just ended, 1885–6, the volumes will be :—

VI. The Pipe Roll of the Ninth year of King Henry II., A.D. 1162–63 (7 rotulets).
VII. The Pipe Roll of the Tenth year of King Henry II., A.D. 1163–64 (4 rotulets).

It has already been suggested that, without in any way delaying the printing of the Pipe Rolls—the principal feature in the Society's scheme—steps should be taken, as soon as practicable, to get into type any other public records of a date anterior to A.D. 1200. In connexion with this proposal it is now intended to commence a distinct series of publications dealing with such records, and, as an initial volume, one comprising a selection of some of the earliest original Charters and Deeds among the Public Records has been decided on. In furtherance of this plan the Honorary Treasurer (Mr. WALFORD D. SELBY) has offered to make the necessary selection, the Honorary Secretary (Mr. JAMES GREENSTREET) has undertaken to read the transcripts with the originals, and Mr. J. HORACE ROUND, one of the Society's Auditors, has consented to write a critical Introduction to the Volume.

Among the Instruments proposed to be published are many original grants of lands by laymen, in the reigns of Stephen and Henry II., to religious houses. The value of these documents to the historian and genealogist cannot be over-estimated, for they preserve to us the names of the principal individuals living in the vicinity of the various monastic establishments. They thus furnish details of family history which are not obtainable from any other source. It is, also, material to bear in mind with regard to these originals, that where they have in some instances been copied into Chartularies, although the transcript gives the general wording of the document, still, the registered version lacks that essential and sometimes sole evidence of date in early MSS.—the handwriting of the original; and further, in the absence of this evidence, the date cannot even be settled by the witnesses' names, for, in too many instances, they are altogether omitted by the scribes of these monastic registers. A comparison of the original charters (now among the Chapter House Records) formerly belonging to the Priory of St. Pancras at Lewes, with the transcripts, as contained in the Chartulary of that House preserved at the British Museum, will best illustrate the foregoing remarks. It is hoped that it will be possible to include in this new series facsimiles of such documents as are of especial interest to the palæographer; but this must depend on the funds available, as the extra volumes will be issued to Members without any increase in the annual subscription.

In the last Report, when commenting on the comparatively large number of Home and Foreign Libraries and other Public Institutions that had already come forward to support the Society, the hope was expressed that the amount of help from such quarters might in the future be largely augmented. The Honorary Secretary has, in accordance with this view, recently addressed a circular letter to all the leading Home and Foreign Libraries that have not yet become Subscribers, and it is believed that this appeal will be widely responded to.

In concluding their Report the Council have to express their regret at the losses by death of the following Members of the Society :—J. B. DAVIDSON, Esq., F.S.A. (the seconder of the adoption of the Report at the First Annual Meeting); CORNELIUS C. WALFORD, Esq., F.S.S.; EDWARD KNOCKER, Esq., F.S.A.; J. R. MOWATT, Esq.; the REV. W. POWELL; J. R. RAINES, Esq.; J. V. HARTING, Esq., F.S.A.; and GEORGE HILBERS, Esq.

The annexed Report of the Auditors shows the state of the Society's funds.

By order of the Council,

JAMES GREENSTREET,
Honorary Secretary.

PREFACE.

IN the sketch of the "System of the Exchequer" during the reign of Henry II., given on pages 35 to 69 of the third volume of the Society's publications, mention was made (p. 50) of the so-called "Dot" system of the Exchequer, for an explanation of which the reader was referred to an Article contributed by the same author to the Antiquary for May, 1884. In consequence, however, of a frequently-expressed desire on the part of Members of the Pipe Roll Society, it was decided to invite Mr. Hubert Hall to furnish, for convenience of reference, a distinct account of this difficult and interesting symbolism as an appendix to his previous sketch. This, Mr. Hall has kindly acceded to, and, the account being hardly sufficient to form a separate publication, it is printed in the ensuing pages as an Introduction to the present volume.

The "Dot" System of the Exchequer.

THE Game of Chess at the Exchequer, according to its most approved etymology, is clearly not named after a "ludus Scaccarii," the game, that is, played on a chequered board, but from the "ludus scaccorum sive latrunculorum," from schach—a dummy or counterfeit presentation—in the German, whence, coming West, it found its way into our vocabulary through the Neo-Latin and official Norman-French, adopting later still a classical form.

It is most essential to grasp the significance of this origin of the word Exchequer, which may, in the widest sense, be interpreted as the chamber wherein stood the table employed for the "ludus computatorum" or "game of money-counters." The form of this table having been already described, it remains now to give some account of the "men" or counters which supplied the material for that mimic contest, which was waged between the Treasurer with his staff and the Sheriff or other Accountant.

The Chessmen of the Exchequer game were in one aspect the counters or dummy coins which, in their different sizes, colours, and combination, represented the actual specie coming into, or disbursed at, the Treasury; just as the Bishops, Knights, and Pawns of the chess-game proper took the place of actual combatants, having certain strategic parts assigned to them, defined and limited by the laws of the play. The bullion actually received, or which remained to be accounted for, was also represented by a subsidiary set of chessmen, so to speak; namely, by the tallies which stood for the cash payments already made upon his Account by the Sheriff, and by the vouchers or receipts which represented other sums disbursed by him on account of the Crown, together with the corresponding warrants or mandates by which such disbursements had been authorised or allowed respectively, as the case might be.

These Tallies, as previously explained,* were shafts of some hard wood, on one side of which notches were cut of peculiar shapes and sizes, corresponding to the figures of account which they represented, and which were deciphered, like the latter, by numeration from left to right. On one of the lateral surfaces (or on both if desired) a superscription was penned, briefly recording the nature of the transaction in which the tally was employed, as "A tally for A against B."

In a typical case, the Sheriff who paid in an advance at the Receipt of the Exchequer upon his Account received credit for the same by a "tally" delivered to him then and there, with the amount of his advance duly recorded upon it. At the same time the officials kept in hand the "counter-tally," in the shape of a symmetrical half of the whole tally, which had been cleft for that purpose, in the same manner as a chirograph or indented writing. It is worth notice that the technical name of the Accountant's indenture was "schacchia,"—"scaccus" or "scach" that is,—or the dummy of the mass of silver now finally deposited in the Treasury, or consigned to the Mint if occasion required.

Of course, if the Accountant were allowed for a sum not actually paid into the Receipt in specie, but disbursed instead by him in the King's service, the Voucher produced by him, that the assignment in point had really been concluded, should correspond with the mandate authorising such assignment, which latter Record, laid up with the tallies themselves amongst the archives of the Marshal's department, already represented so much more specie, here supposed only to exist, and which would eventually, through other channels, find its way into the Treasury or go to balance the Rolls of the Issue and Receipt sides of the Revenue. In fact, there can be but little doubt that these dummies, whether counter-tallies or mandates preponderated amongst them, formed the chief assets of the Sheriff when he stood before the Barons with the sum of his reckoning on the morrow of St. Michael.

Just as the Tally stood for money in the Chess-circle of the Exchequer, so the paper denominations of Pounds, Shillings, and even Marks, both of gold and silver, were in themselves dummies of the single coin in general use during the halcyon days of the Exchequer. That coin was the silver penny, described therefore, with equal justice, either as "denarius" or "nummus," and it was an obvious convenience to be able to denote its aggregate value by a single symbol for each of such unwieldy numbers as 12,240, 4,800, 24,000, 240,000, or even 2,400,000; especially, too, when such symbols needed only to be multiplied within themselves by at most 20, 5, 10, 10, and again 10, respectively, to discover the value of any inclusive sum.

The counters themselves in use at the Exchequer were coins of a size and appearance easily distinguishable from current sterling money. For this purpose Besants, or the depreciated "solidi" of the Eastern Empire, were in requisition at an early date. These "Byzantines" were frequently received at the Exchequer in the fines paid by alien merchants, and were either sent as bullion to the Mint, or retained for use as counters. Their intrinsic value for the latter service was estimated in the early part of the thirteenth century as equal to 1*s.* 9*d.* sterling. Besides these there was another gold counter available, the "obolus," which might be either a weight equal to 12 grs., or a half-noble, when these were coined. In reality, however, the obolus was the specific half of some current denomination, without itself possessing any recognised circulation. This fiction has given rise to innumerable difficulties in the study of early finance. Madox, for instance, confesses himself unable to comprehend the meaning of the entry "unam marcam auri de obolo Musce" in the fine of a Jewish merchant. But it is quite clear that this fine of some £6 sterling is an equivalent for half a pennyweight or 12 grs. of musk (that most costly of perfumes) bargained for by the Crown, just as it accepted falcons, or hunting dogs, or furs, under special circumstances.

It is evident, then, that a half-pennyweight might be recognised at the Exchequer, and at the same time could be conveniently employed for ordinary purposes as a counter. At any rate, no "noble" was in existence at the date when the Dialogus was written, and that Treatise makes particular mention of an "obolus auri" used as a counter. It seems, indeed, that, in the time of the good bishop Richard of London, both a gold and a silver obolus were used as official ready-reckoners, the former standing for £10,—that is, for 2,400 pence,—the latter for 10*s.*, or 120 pence. Naturally, the silver obolus, weighing but 12 grs., would appear only half the size of the sterling penny of 24 grs., and would thus escape confusion with it, just as silver-metal coins of about half the size of a three-penny piece are often used as counters in round-games at cards; and as, per contra, the use of the "Hanover sovereign" for a like purpose once gave rise to such serious abuses.

Still later, in the reign of Edward II., besides the Byzantines already mentioned, we find Venetian "shillings" in chief favour at the Exchequer as counters, on account of their superior size and weight. The intrinsic value of these coins was estimated at 1*s.* 6*d.* sterling. The distinguishing feature of counters was therefore, now, an exaggerated instead of a minute size.

We are not to suppose that the chess-tournament holden after the Feast of St. Michael was a "game" played from the very first move in each of these trials of skill between the official combatants. Its earlier stages had been all attained long before the parties met for this the "final heat," as it were, of the annual event. The Treasurer had made his first few moves on paper, by way of correspondence with his opponent. That is to say, the latter had received a Summons for the "View" and "Profer" of his Account to be taken and made at the Exchequer in the Quinzisme of the preceding Easter. This fact will account for the aspect of the game previously described (see vol. iii. p. 41); where the accuracy of previous Charges and Allowances on the gross account have now simply to be checked, and the outstanding balance added to that already brought forward.

Thus, supposing the onus of the Accountant's charge to amount to £199. 13*s*. 4*d*., it may be assumed that some £100 of this has been already paid in, say in 6 tallies, or allowed for, perhaps, by an equal number of mandates. These tallies and mandates, as we have seen, are so many dummies marshalled upon the Accountant's side, not actually placed on the board; but, from their evidence, the counters are arranged in the requisite numerical combination, as a counterbalance to the Treasurer's statement, within the space nearest to the computator. When the whole sum of the Sheriff's assets is at length exhausted, there is a pause, whilst the evidence in his favour is being further scrutinised: the tallies produced by his servants are compared with the authentic foils, and his vouchers with the mandates filed amongst the Marshal's county collectanea. All of these proving satisfactory, or satisfaction being exacted in default, a series of rapid exchanges (in chess parlance) follows; or, in the concise language of the Dialogus, "fit simplex subtractio," and the game is won and lost, or left merely drawn.

To explain the rationale of this conclusion, we must refer to the Problem figured in the next page (Figs. 1 and 2). In each of these figures the Treasurer's counters are arranged in the upper spaces to represent a sum of £199. 13*s.* 4*d.*, the column furthest to the right representing Pence, the next to the left Shillings, the next Pounds, the next Twenties of Pounds, and the last Hundreds of Pounds. In the same way, in the lower spaces, the Accountant's assets are shown in a similar combination, except for the Shillings and Pence columns, which exhibit a deficit, as will be seen, of 6*s.* 8*d.*

State of the game—the Sheriff is in debt $6^s$ $8^d$ on the Sum of his Account.

We will now search for the key to this formidable-looking cryptogram, which is, after all, a nut easily cracked by the mere mathematician, and which should never have presented so insurmountable an obstacle to all fruitfulness of labour in this field of research. In the first place, we must premise that the system in question is a decimal one. We were prepared for this discovery by the statement, made in the Dialogus, as to the practice of placing a counter in every tenth place for intervening units in the second and third columns or principal columns of Account. For odd units the early computator would have recourse to sterling coins, either separately or in combination. But, at a comparatively early period, it may be clearly gathered that counters only, in combination, were exclusively used.

To begin with the Pence column.* As, by far the majority of sums in the addition of these denominations, owing chiefly to the conventional quotation of marks, left a remainder over of 4 or 8, it is unusual to find any other combinations of "dots" to express pence to the amount of 11 or less. These, then, were figured by four dots at the angles of a square and three dots at the points of a triangle, respectively, as seen in Figure 2, on p. xiii. The units above 8, however, might be figured, on occasion, by dots placed below the base of the triangle, as for 9;  for 10; and  for 11.

Remainders of pence under 8 were easily represented by an aggregation of "dots" in the usual way, as exemplified in the following method of figuring numbers from 1 to 20 in both of the two next columns. In the case of these latter, though doubtless an arithmetician could assign apter reasons for the combinations than any I can myself afford, I have added a brief key to the ratio of each, which will make the working aspect of the question intelligible to the reader.

* Mr. C. T. Martin, of the Public Record Office, has discovered later examples of a Farthing column to the right of the Pence, with an ordinary maximum combination of 4 "dots," but as fractions of a penny were dealt with at the Exchequer in these early times de incremento these have not been noticed in the text. The same gentleman was the first to demonstrate the fact that the superior "dot" in the Pence column is a symbol for 6*d.*

‡ Decimal and semi-decimal points combined above the unit line.

It will be obvious what an economy of time and labour was effected by this simple expedient. In the case of £18, for instance, the 4,320 pence contained therein were actually pictured on the board, and accounted for, to the dullest of accountants, by the clearest ocular demonstration; and yet, by means of the admirable system of the Exchequer, not one of these 4,320 coins needed to be produced, their existence being satisfactorily proven by the comparison of two little bits of notched stick, and their sum counted, as it were, on the fingers, by the combination of five metal counters in duplicate.

The reader will understand that 20*s.* was figured in the third column as a unit; and £21, £101, £1,001, £10,001, in the same way, in their respective columns, also as units. Given this key, the inquiring spirit will readily be enabled to work out any possible combination that could be presented upon the Exchequer chess-board.

We may fairly consider the above explanation of the "Dot" system as substantially proved; indeed, its accuracy is capable of mathematical demonstration. It is now more than two years since this theory was first put forward by the Author, and no objections of any kind have been urged against it. In fact, the practical experience of other workers has tended to establish its correctness. As early as 1883 Mr. C. Trice Martin and Mr. Brodie, of the Public Record Office, had already discovered a key to the cypher on their own account, and that this key corresponded exactly with that published in the Antiquary was proved by the independent working out, with the same result, of the following remarkable and difficult combination:—

Since then, Mr. Greenstreet, the Hon. Secretary of this Society, has taken every opportunity of carefully noting such instances of Exchequer "Dots" as came within his knowledge; and Mr. Vincent has tested other entries independently. Amongst the former may be mentioned a very perfect set of "dots" in the Lay Subsidy Roll, co. Warwick, for 16 Hen. VIII., Bundle 192, No. 130[A].

The further question certainly arises as to the connexion of these later "pen-and-ink dots" with the counters of the early Exchequer. Here we are confronted with an absence of early instances, due, no doubt, to the employment of actual counters down to a comparatively late date. Therefore, it is not till the Tudor period that we meet with the later system, though isolated instances are reported from Records of the fifteenth century.* On this account, perhaps, there has been some disposition evinced to assign these "pen-and-ink dots" to the period of the general introduction of "Arabic" numerals, coinciding perhaps with the use of the Eastern "Abacus." But, on the other hand, we may suppose that such symbolism by way of picture-writing was practised amongst most nations at an early stage of official development. At least, we know that this was the case in England, from the examples preserved by Sir Francis Palgrave in his "Kalendars and Inventories of the Exchequer," and the connexion between the "game of counters" played at the Exchequer in the days of the author of the Dialogus and the later "pen-and-ink dots" of the fifteenth or sixteenth centuries, is obviously complete from the description of the Treatise in question.† Moreover, both systems were exclusively used in the Exchequer, a fact which may be illustrated in a somewhat remarkable manner. "Pen-and-ink dots" sometimes

* It seems, however, impossible that such instances should have escaped recent investigation. Certainly none have been discovered by Sir J. H. Ramsay in the course of his exhaustive researches in the Pells and Auditor's Records. It is worthy of mention that Sir J. H. Ramsay has noticed a similar use of "checkers" at the Exchequer of Scotland in ancient times.

† "Quid ad calculatorem."—Dialogus, i. 5.

occur amongst the State Papers of the sixteenth century, but in every case the calculator has been found to be an official of the Exchequer. Thus, Lord Treasurer Burleigh sometimes made use of them, by force of habit, for the purpose of checking a commercial schedule in his other capacity of Prime Minister. The latest instance of these "pen-and-ink dots," that has hitherto been found, is of the somewhat abnormal date 1676, here again in an Exchequer Account,* and carefully preserving the system described in 1177. The entry is as follows:—

= £4,438. 10*s*. 4*d*.

Thus, it may be safely concluded that the system of reckoning by counters, as described in the Dialogus, was consistently preserved down to a comparatively modern date—"Secundum consuetum cursum Scaccarii, non legibus arismeticis."
